If you are caught speeding in Missouri, you will need to pay the fine. Missouri Traffic Tickets can help you with that! The amount of money you owe depends on how fast the officer or radar determined that you were speeding. The state breaks down the fines based on units of five miles per hour by which you exceeded the speed limit. If you choose not to contest your ticket, you will need to pay the full fine.

The cost of the ticket depends upon how fast the officer or radar determined that you were speeding. The state breaks down the fines based on units of five miles per hour by which you exceeded the speed limit. You may be wondering, "Do I need a lawyer in Missouri, just for a speeding ticket?" If you are planning to contest the ticket—or if you are required to appear in court for a traffic violation—then the answer is yes.

Speeding tickets are one the easiest ways to increase points on a driving record that can result in a suspension or increased insurance rates. You need a credible, licensed, traffic attorney who can present your case before the court and get you more favorable rulings based on your circumstances and your driving record. So when you get traffic tickets in Missouri, turn to us right away!
