The Churchill Arms, Kensington

Built in the 50s, the Churchill Arms, Kensington pub was once Winston Churchill's grandparents avourite. The decoration is a medley of wicker baskets, chamber pots, Churchill and US presidential memorabilia and flags, while the thriving Thai restaurant serves up curries, stir-fries and noodles amid a jungle of greenery.

The Churchill Arms, Kensington is claimed to be the first-ever London pub with a Thai menu. Long-serving landlord Gerry O'Brien has built a real sense of bonhomie thanks to open fires, candles, amber lights and hot toddies during the winter, while the bar deals in real ales and guest beers which get the CAMRA seal of approval.
