Courtauld Institute of Art

The Courtauld Institute of Art is one of the world's leading schools for the history and conservation of art and architecture. Part of the University of London as an independent college, the Courtauld is located in historic Somerset House on The Strand, right by London's West End. The central location give students easy access to some of the capital's museums and galleries. Courtauld Institute of Art students enjoy high-tech facilities, including outstanding libraries and the Courtauld Gallery collection of paintings, drawings and prints, sculpture and decorative arts.

Courtauld Institute of Art, International Students

The Courtauld Institute of Art welcomes all students from around the world. Almost a quarter of Courtauld Institute of Art student population is from overseas. Students can participate in clubs and make use of its facilities, including a music venue, bars, cafe, shop and fitness centre which has a swimming pool.

What Students Say about The Courtauld Institute of Art

"The Courtauld is a unique place. The resources are unsurpassed and with London's massive art collections on your doorstep, there are endless opportunities for research and study as well as the chance to broaden your personal experience of all types of art. There is a good mix of students from the UK and abroad which adds to the sense of diversity and vibrancy."
