Reasons for the Demand of Kurdish Translation Services

The Middle East has quite a different culture as compared to the rest of the world. In fact, their way of lifestyle, heritage, history, and several other such aspects are also pretty different from what we normally see in other countries. One such major point of difference is the list of different languages which are spoken in the Middle Eastern countries and the surrounding areas. Starting from Turkish to Arabic, several such languages are spoken in these places.

However, recently, the Kurdish language has become one of the most accepted languages not only in the Middle Eastern countries but also in several other Asian countries like Pakistan, Azerbaijan, and so on. Hence, the demand for Kurdish translation services have increased rapidly.

What is Kurdish language and where it is spoken? Kurdish language comprises of five major dialects which are spoke by different communities in Kurdistan. These dialects are:

- Kurnanjior Northern Kurdish
- Sorani or Central Kurdish
- Failior Southern Kurdish
- Gorani or Hawrami
- Zazaki

It first popularized from small communities living in the rural parts of southern, northern, and central Kurdistan. As people started migrating from these areas to other parts of Middle East and surrounding Asian countries, the language got more popularity and now is spoken in several countries, including the three countries where it has been accepted as one of the official languages- Iran, Iraq, and Armenia. In other countries, however, the language is yet to become official but is spoken widely in Azerbaijan, Syria, Lebanon, Pakistan, Turkey, and Turkmenistan.

Need for Kurdish Translation Service

As more and more people are migrating to different parts of the world from these countries, the need to have a reliable and professional translation service for Kurdish language is also increasing. Presently, it has become imminent for most translation companies to include Kurdish in their linguistic list.

The team at Vanan Translation consists of:
